Once Again to the Front

More determined than ever before to sell everything in the

COTTON

Underwear Department

Cheaper than any other firm. You may wish to know how we can afford to do this. We are not at all content about declining this fact. For we would like you to know that we can always substantiate our assertions. We have just bought out the entire stock of a defunct Cotton Underwear House, and bought them awfully cheap. This enables us to sell you the goods cheaper than they could be bought elsewhere and still make a living profit.

One lot comprises Gowns, Chemises and Drawers at 20 cents each.

40c. Chemise, with embroidered yoke and tucking, best cotton.

50c. Chemise, with solid front embroidery; former price, $1.48; also, other styles at same price.

At 50c. Drawers with cambric tucked ruffle and tucking above ruffle.

At 50c. We give you drawers with embroidered ruffle.

At 70c. A gown with tucked yoke and embroidery, elegant style.

At 90c. A gown with five pieces of embroidery, former Hubbard style.

A gown at $1.50, made with solid yoke of embroidery, mother Hubbard style, worth $2.50. We have four other styles at this price.

At 90c. A skirt with embroidered ruffle, different styles.

Also, a lot of Corset Covers from 45c. to $1.25, high or low necked, best cambric. These are the latest designs, with lace or embroidery.

LOTS OF OTHER BARGAINS.

Which we can't take space to mention here, but would be of benefit to you to see them displayed on our counters on the second floor. One whole floor devoted to the sale of Cotton Underwear.

Beyond a doubt the largest and most complete in the city.

SEVENTH STREET.

"HITTING A PIPE."

Startling Facts About Opium Dens In This City.

THE NUMBER SAID TO BE 200

A Vice That Is Carrying To Destruction Bright Young Men, and Has Even Entered Respectable Homes, Where It Is Practiced By Ladies.

Two or three evenings ago a reporter of THE CRITIC sat in an up-to-date restaurant taking luncheon, when two cadaverous, dissipated-looking society youths came in and occupied a seat near by. They both looked as if they had been conducting a prolonged spree. Their eyes were glassy, their features distorted, and altogether they appeared as if they had been "doing the town" for quite a time.

A friend of the reporter's came up and remarked: "There is a society connected with the lives of these two youngsters," pointing to the dissipated-looking youths. "One is the son of the Hon. — and the other the offspring of one of our great Generals, now deceased."

"What is the trouble with the boys?" asked the reporter. "Is it too much strong drink?"

"Oh, no," was the reply. "Those boys are no habitues of opium joints."

"Opium joints in Washington? Have they not all been broken up by the Police?" asked THE CRITIC in astonishment.

"No, sir; not by any means. There are several opium dens in full blast in this city to-day. There is scarcely a Chinese laundry in the city where you cannot go and 'hit the pipe.' I have been to those places myself and have seen lots of men and boys, the sons of our prominent business people, there, stupefied and drunk from the effects of the terrible drug."

These remarks caused the reporter, in the interest of his country, to make an investigation into the subject of opium smoking in this city, and with a view of ascertaining, if possible, the extent to which the habit is indulged. He made inquiries of a number of persons who "play against the pipe." From them he learned that John Chinaman has made rapid progress at the National Capital in the introduction of his favorite diversion.

Many ladies, too, are said to smoke the drug, and these, for the most part, own "lajoyas," or, in other words, keep at their houses the pipes, lamps, pans, and other paraphernalia which enter into opium smoking. The Chinese report quite a harvest by initiating the unsophisticated into the uses of the poisonous drug.

A man who has had financial interest in the establishment of Ah Feh, at Georgetown, when that enterprising Celestial citizen operated his "joint," was seen by the reporter, who asked him if opium smoking was on the increase in this city. Said he:

"You may not believe me, but I will bet money that I can show you 200 places in Washington and Georgetown where opium is smoked. Talking about being on the increase, why, where there was one 'joint' two years ago, there are seventy-five now. I've got into the habit myself and can't stop it. But I feel sorry for some of the young men who are smoking. It's an awful thing, and once you start in, it's a good-by. My nervous system is so fearfully broken by the use of opium that I am unable to work at my business at all."

"I have known young men who come from the best families in this District to spend as much as thirty-six hours on a bench in an opium den, then, they are touching food. I tell you that, though I am a smoker myself, I should like to see every den in the city broken up. Opium is leading hundreds of young men to early graves."

As there is no statute in the District prohibiting opium smoking, would it not be well for Congress to enact some legislation on the subject? It is a question, punishable by both fine and imprisonment to conduct a "joint" in New York and some of the other States. Such a law should be made for this District.

Obituary.
In the death of John R. Dickinson, late of the Interior Department, there passes away another true and tried hero, and a man of sterling worth once well known in the political arena. Judge Dickinson had achieved distinction as a journalist and the constant companion of the late President of his brother, Daniel S. Dickinson, who held so prominent a position and so striking an attitude in the nominating convention of 1854, when he went to represent General Cass' interests, and proved true to them by refusing to accept for himself the nomination spontaneously and demonstrably tendered. Judge Dickinson's reminiscences of the long times of two and a half years ago would have afforded material for a volume of absorbing interest.

Bishop Pare's Reception.
The new Bishop of the Maryland Diocese, assisted by Mrs. Pare, Mrs. Atwater and Miss Pare, and the Rev. Irving McElroy, held a large and well-attended reception last evening at Bishop Pare's residence, on New York avenue.

The visiting bishops, clergy and vestrymen constituted a majority of the guests, a reception next week to the congregation of Epiphany and personal friends being contemplated.

The new Bishop was the recipient of innumerable and earnest congratulations, complimentary and good wishes. The diocesan residence at Baltimore is being renovated and enlarged for the new Bishop.

Will They Get It?
The question whether or not the National Baseball Club of this city, will enter the American Association will probably be determined to-morrow. If the Metropolitan decide to leave the association, the National will succeed them. The club is generally thought, is the only one that can be taken by the Mets, for if they remain in they will play a losing game all the season.

Death of Captain Payne, of Warrenton.
News reaches Washington of the death yesterday of Captain C. E. Payne, of the Warrenton, Captain Payne was widely known and much esteemed in this city and vicinity. His death was caused by pleuro-pneumonia.
